FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

Randolph Air Force Base

BY BRIG. GEN. CARL B. McDANIEL, USAF,
Commanding

ONLY a few days before the outbreak of the Korean war Randolph Field, Tex., celebrated its 20th birthday. A gift to the government by a group of civic minded San Antonio residents, the 2,300 acre tract was officially dedicated 20 June, 1930, to the memory of an Air Force pioneer, Capt. William M. Randolph.

American military aviation was still in its infancy then, and the pilot training inaugurated here became one of the most important implements in its development to a mighty weapon of National Defense. More than 18,000 pilots and officers in the U. S. Air Force have looked upon Randolph Air Force Base as their Alma Mater during the two decades. With them the name of this flying school became a by-word in the nation's aeronautical history and spread to the many foreign countries which sent several hundred of their fliers here for training.

Today pilot training is no longer the primary mission of this base. Only once before was the 20 year curriculum interrupted for a period of a few months. The exigencies of World War II brought B-29's and combat crews to the Randolph flight lines, but with the end of the conflict the aviation cadet program was once more resumed. Now the superfortresses, no longer classified as heavy bombers, but aerial giants still despite their designation of "medium bombers," have returned to these hangars and runways. Again the demands of war have brought them here.

Combat crews training is a radical departure from the routine of a basic flying school. Since the latter remains at the base on a reduced scale, the reorganization becomes more delicate than it would be in the case of a complete change-over. To substitute one by the other is more easily achieved than a compromise of facilities to serve both programs to the utmost of their effectiveness.

With the arrival of the first B-29's "Operation Proceed," the official Air Force designation of combat crew training here, got under way. The East Stage was cleared of T-6's, and barracks were vacated to make room for the supporting personnel of the project. The 3511th Combat Training Group was formed under the command of Col. Calvin E. Peeler, veteran pilot and pioneer in heavy bomber (Please turn to Page 120)

2218 New Captains, More Promotions

The Army this week released the names of 2218 Regular and non-Regular lieutenants temporarily promoted to the grade of Captain.

The promotions are effective as of 27 Sept.

At the same time the promotions to captain were released, the Army was making preparations to initiate the second round of temporary promotions resulting from the expansion program.

It is believed that whereas the first group of promotions began with temporary advancements to colonel, the second lists will be in inverse order of rank.

Among the 2218 lieutenants promoted to captain were 380 Regular officers and 1838 non-Regulars. A breakdown of the number of officers promoted on each of the lists follows:

Army Promotion List—372 Regular officers; 1719 non-Regular officers.

Chaplains List—2 Regular officers; 16 non-Regular officers.

Judge Advocate General's Corps List—6 Regular officers; 14 non-Regular officers.

Medical Service Corps List—0 Regular officers; 89 non-Regular officers.

Previously, THE JOURNAL published on 9 Sept. the names of officers chosen for temporary promotion to colonel and lieutenant colonel. On 16 Sept. the names of new temporary majors were printed.

To date, in the current temporary promotion program, the Army has given advancement to 666 former lieutenant colonels, 885 majors and 785 captains, in addition to the 2218 lieutenants promoted this week—a total of 4554 promotions.

Army officials have emphasized time and again that the promotions announced to date represent only the first phase. They stress that additional promotions will be made for the rest of the year.

Yet to be released are names of Medical Department officers selected for promotion (Please turn to Page 131)

THE WAR IN KOREA

WITH the liberation of Seoul and the linking of the Pusan and Inchon beachheads major operations of United Nations forces in Korea this week approached a victorious conclusion.

The Red invasion army from North Korea has been decisively defeated and remnants of the Communist troops in numerous pockets in the mountains of South Korea are being systematically eliminated. Because of difficult terrain the completion of this phase of the campaign may take several weeks.

Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, Commanding General of the Eighth Army, declared that the North Korean army had ceased to exist as an organized force, and that all that remained was for the United Nations troops to destroy the fleeing remnants before they crossed into North Korea.

The general said he had received no orders relative to crossing the 38th parallel of latitude, but that he expected a decision soon. A State Department official in Washington was quoted as saying that the matter of crossing into North Korea in pursuit of the fleeing enemy was a military decision to be made by General Douglas MacArthur, commander-in-chief of the United Nations forces.

The climax of the Korean campaign came less than two weeks after the spectacular reversal of the military situation due to the bold and highly successful amphibious operations at Inchon. The severance of main communications lines near Seoul left 100,000 North Korean troops attacking the United Nations' beachhead, 150 miles to the south, in an almost hopeless position.

The major offensive of the Eighth Army all along the perimeter of the southern beachhead coincided with the Inchon landing. After a week of hard fighting a notable breakthrough was made all along the northern front. Sweeping gains were made in every sector and the advancing United Nations (Please turn to Next Page)

Hospitals Reopening On MacArthur Data

An urgent appeal from General of the Army Douglas MacArthur for increasing beds to care for combat wounded brought prompt Congressional action this week.

Concerned because a statement from the Far East Commander warned that adequate hospital facilities are lacking, the House Armed Services Committee summarily announced this week that thousands of additional beds are to be provided. Directly, the Department of Defense issued a statement saying that the Armed Services Committee's program would be implemented.

It is known that General of the Army MacArthur, a stickler for proper transmittal of official statements, sent his request for expansion of hospital facilities through Department of the Army channels. Also, it became known this week that Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr., hurried back from New York City to present data to the Armed Services Committee regarding the need for more hospital beds.

It could very well have been that Mr. Pace, on the basis of General of the Army MacArthur's message, went over the head of the Department of Defense Director of Medical Services to present the Army's viewpoint to the Congressional group.

Three deactivated Army general hospitals—defense "casualties" of controversial pre-Korean economy slashes—were ordered reopened. Simultaneously, it was announced that hospitals at five Army stations are to be expanded.

The three Army hospitals to be reactivated—Valley Forge AH, Pa., Percy Jones AH, Mich., and Murphy AH, Mass.—were shut down by the Department of Defense, notably by the Director of Medical Services, earlier this year. The action was taken despite the fervent plea of a special House Armed Services hospital subcommittee and in the face of protests of top uniformed medical authorities of the Armed Forces.

There were reports circulating on Capitol Hill this week that the forceful about-face on the hospital closings was demanded by the House Armed Services Committee, through its chairman, Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) after receipt of an urgent communication from the Far East Command.

Chairman Vinson said this week that the hospital expansions also demand the "immediate acquisition" of approximately 1500 additional physicians from civilian life, most of whom will be brought in as a result of recent passage of the special draft law for doctors. Primary target of this legislation are the thousands of young physicians who were deferred during World War II to pursue medical education, among whom hundreds received their medical schooling at government expense.

But in addition to these younger doctors, the Services will have need to recall more medical Reservists, since specialists (Please turn to Page 121) troops swept aside practically all resistance to recapture towns lost three months ago in the heartbreaking withdrawals characteristic of the first weeks of the campaign.

The most sensational advance was made by the 1st Cavalry Division. After meeting stubborn resistance at the beginning of the drive this division crashed through the tough outer crust and advanced rapidly for more than 100 miles to the northwest against relatively light opposition.

A tank unit of this division raced northward along the Pusan-Seoul highway, and shortly before midnight on Tuesday, 26 Sept., Korean time, met patrols of the American 7th Division four miles south of Suwon. The 7th Division had landed at Inchon and elements had pushed 20 miles south of Seoul to take Suwon. The juncture of the two divisions bisects the southern half of the Korean peninsula, and isolates elements of from five to seven Korean divisions in the mountainous southwest quarter of Korea.

The capture of Seoul came this week after exceptionally hard street fighting, during which sections of this city of more than a million population were completely destroyed. North Korean troops made a desperate stand, which made it necessary to destroy much of the city before the resistance was overcome.

The assault on the city was begun by two columns of the 1st Marine Division. One column crossed the Han River several miles west of Seoul and moved eastward into the outskirts of the city. The other column took the industrial suburb of Yongdong-po, south of the river opposite Seoul, and later crossed the river into the city.

Subsequently elements of the Army 7th Division made a wide sweep to the east and attacked the city from that direction, capturing South Mountain which dominates Seoul, and from which accurate artillery and mortar fire of the Reds had impeded the advance of the Marines.

Throughout the city the Reds had erected strong road barriers of concrete blocks, street car rails, sandbags and other obstructions, and had built pillboxes and machine gun nests at important street intersections. They placed snipers in many public buildings and private dwellings. This slowed our troops, but after several days of fierce fighting the entire city was liberated though a few suicide units of Red troops were still causing some trouble.

Street fighting had been expected and our forces entering the city proceeded methodically, isolating areas where resistance was heavy and clearing them out with tank-led units. Several large fires were started by artillery shells and burned many flimsy dwellings. However, the main business districts and the better residential sections, as well as most of the public buildings largely escaped heavy damage.

Casualties among the North Korean troops defending Seoul were very heavy, but the losses of our troops were relatively light. A regiment of the 7th Division fighting in the city inflicted more than 1,000 casualties on the enemy, but its own losses were only about 100 killed and wounded.

Defenders of Seoul consisted largely of troops of the local Communist garrison, though some help may have been received from units withdrawn from the southern beachhead after the Inchon landing. Soon after the major offensive of the Eighth Army in the south had begun it became evident that resistance, particularly in the northeastern sector and immediately north of the Allied advance base at Taegu, had materially weakened.

This decline in opposition may have been due in part to enemy withdrawals from these sectors. However, there were no indications that the Seoul garrison had been heavily reinforced. This suggests the possibility that most of the Red troops able to escape from the south retreated beyond the 38th parallel into North Korea.

At the northeastern end of the long perimeter of the old Pusan beachhead the South Korean 3d Division was able to advance along the east coast road almost without resistance. The Red 5th Division which had previously made a strong drive in this section of the front completely disintegrated. The division commander, large numbers of Red soldiers and great quantities of military equipment were captured.

This Communist division had been under constant attack from the land, sea and air for days. The American cruiser Helena, off the east coast, poured a devastating fire into retreating Red troops, and Allied planes continuously attacked them in support of advancing South Koreans. Apparently the soldiers of the Red 5th division who escaped death or capture doffed their uniforms and disappeared into the hills attired as local peasants.

Farther inland the South Korean Capital, 8th, 6th and 1st Divisions made long gains against the Red 12th, 8th, 6th and 1st Divisions. There were indications that many of the Communist troops had been withdrawn from this sector, with strong rear guard elements remaining to oppose the advance of the four South Korean divisions.

To the northwest the American 1st Cavalry Division stormed through the Communist 15th and 3rd Divisions, capturing successively the towns of Tabu, Chongju, Chochiwon, Chonan and Osan, to link up with elements of the American 7th Division moving south from Suwon.

On the left flank of the 1st Cavalry Division the American 24th Division made long strides to the northwest, through the enemy 2d and 10th Divisions, capturing Kumchon and Yongdong, and late this week took the former provisional capital city, Taejon. At Yongdong the 24th Division liberated three wounded American prisoners of the Reds, who had been held in jail, half-starved on a meager daily diet of three handfuls of barley.

At Taejon the 24th Division learned that there was a possibility that its heroic commander, Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, missing since the loss of Taejon two months ago, may still be alive. South Koreans reported that they had overheard Red officers say that the missing general had been held prisoner at Chongju and that he was to be removed to Seoul. American prisoners of war in Seoul were taken to North Korea just prior to the liberation of that city.

The heaviest enemy resistance was encountered on the western and southwestern sectors by the 2d and 25th Divisions. Apparently the Red 4th, 3d and 7th Divisions were given the assignment of a last-ditch defense against the advancing Americans. For several days the two American divisions made only limited gains. Finally a major breakthrough was effected and both organizations advanced deep into enemy-held territory.

The 2d Division liberated Hyopchon and Kochang and mopped up several large pockets of enemy troops caught behind American lines. The 25th Division captured the bitterly contested town of Chinju and then advanced to Uiryeong, Hadong, and Namwon. At Namwon 80 American soldiers captured by the Reds were liberated, and at Hadong 11 others were freed. Many of the prisoners had been wounded and 11 of them were litter cases.

At Chinju the 25th Division found the bodies of 12 American soldiers with their hands bound behind their backs. These were bodies of prisoners of the Reds who had brutally murdered them just before the Communists withdrew from the town. Two other American soldiers who had been machine-gunned and left for dead by their captors were still alive when rescued.

The United States Navy destroyer Endicott furnished Naval gunfire in support of the left flank of the 25th Division along the south coast of the Korean peninsula. Later when the destroyer ran out of targets in this sector it moved north along the coast to aid in wiping out enemy pockets in the coastal mountains behind the lines of South Korean troops.

The number of enemy troops still in Southern Korea remains uncertain. Prior to the Inchon landing it was estimated that there were at least 100,000 either committed along the perimeter of the Pusan beachhead or in close reserve.

These troops were in 13 divisions, one of which, the 9th, is reported to have been withdrawn as soon as the Inchon operation was begun. Elements of this division, with part of the recently organized 18th Division, were believed to have participated in the defense of Seoul.

Heavy casualties during the past two weeks greatly reduced the strength and effectiveness of the remaining Red divisions. Though no large withdrawals were reported by air reconnaissance it is possible that appreciable numbers in organized units were able to move at night to North Korea from the northern and Northeastern sectors.

Elsewhere in the battle area, except in the southwest, the Red Army appears to have completely collapsed, with the divisions disintegrating. While great amounts of heavy equipment have not been captured our troops have found many large caches of artillery ammunition, and some hidden guns are being uncovered.

Allowing for casualties, it is now estimated that the total number of Red troops south of Seoul is at least 50,000. This number appears to be dwindling as Red soldiers don civilian clothes and disappear. Others are likely to form guerrilla bands and to attempt to hold out in the mountains, raiding the ripening rice fields for sustenance.

Remnants of the Red army north of the 38th parallel will probably be called upon to surrender unconditionally. Their failure to do so may result in military operations in North Korea to the Manchurian border, thus creating a situation that may be fraught with international complications.

However, active intervention by the Chinese Reds or the Russians is considered unlikely. Having refrained from active participation in the war at a time when this might conceivably have saved the North Koreans it would appear illogical for them to enter it when an Allied victory is an accomplished fact.

With hostilities, except for minor guerrilla action, near an end, it is probable that the United States will wish to turn over much of the occupation duties to other United Nations forces. It is expected that elimination of Red guerrillas will be left largely to South Korean troops. The expected early arrival of additional Allied ground troops, estimated at 30,000, will make it possible to relieve two or three American divisions, to be returned to the United States or Japan.

The arrival this week of an Australian unit of ground troops, of unannounced strength, increases the representation of foreign troops in Korea. In addition to American and South Korean ground soldiers there are now in the combat zone a British brigade, a Philippine combat team, and an Australian unit. Additional ground troops are expected from Great Britain, New Zealand, Canada, France, Holland, Belgium, Thailand and Turkey.

In the final weeks of the Korean campaign the United Nations ground troops received most effective support from Allied sea and air forces. The interdiction of roads and railways by air attacks isolated the battle area, and prevented arrival of supplies desperately needed by the North Koreans. Retreating enemy troops were mercilessly bombed and machine-gunned from the air, while other planes gave close battle support to ground troops.

In a tragic accident 20 British soldiers were killed and 21 wounded by American planes rendering tactical air support. An error in identification resulted in the bombing of friendly troops.

Allied warships in the Inchon-Seoul area furnished long-range artillery fire for American and South Korean troops advancing on Seoul. Accurate Naval gunfire from the U. S. battleship Missouri and the cruisers Toledo and Rochester was particularly effective.

Navy and Marine planes from the U. S. Carriers Valley Forge, Philippine Sea, Boxer and Badoeng Straits operated in close support of the troops around Seoul and north of the Inchon area.

Operating off the eastern and southern coasts of the Korean peninsula Allied cruisers and destroyers rendered effective support of American and South Korean ground troops advancing on enemy positions.

Allied warships late this week bombarded small ports along the west coast of Korea from Ongjin, just south of the 38th parallel, all the way south to Kusan, near the 36th parallel. This extensive bombardment was in an effort to make certain that no Red troops were being evacuated from these ports.

Air reconnaissance reports late this week disclosed new construction on east coast airfields in North Korea at Wonsan and Konan. There was no evidence that any planes were at these fields, nor any indication of any revival of the North Korean air force. However, a flight of American B-29 medium bombers over North Korea reported that it had been approached by four propeller-driven planes, which resembled the American Bell P-39. These planes were without distinguishing markings and they made no attempt to attack the formation of B-29s. During World War II large numbers of P-39 planes were sent by the United States to the Russian air force.

Armed Forces Confirmations

The record in the Office of the Executive Secretary of the United States Senate reveals that during the Second Session of the 81st Congress there were confirmations of nominations for appointment or promotion in the Army of 5,411 persons; 5,455 in the Air Force; 11,162 in the Navy, and 1,038 in the Marine Corps.

Prepare New Order For Tax Exemptions

Following Presidential approval late last week of the new income tax legislation, which provides complete tax exemption for enlisted personnel and a $200 per month exemption for officers in combat zones, work was begun this week on preparation of the implementing Executive Order.

The new tax measure, which will result in decreased take-home pay, for all Service personnel not in the combat area to be specified, goes into effect on 1 Oct.

Both the Democratic and Republican leadership have declared that when Congress resumes on 27 Nov. the newly enacted income tax legislation will be reviewed, particularly with regard to the matter of excess profits for corporations.

At that time, it is believed also that a number of Congressmen will press for an additional amendment to broaden the income tax exemption to include all Service personnel, regardless of "chance of assignment."

It is recalled that bills to include all military personnel—not just those in combat—in a special tax exemption category were introduced before Congress recessed.

But because of the desire to speed legislative action on pending business in time for a recess before the November elections, hearings could not be held on the Service-wide tax exemption proposals.

Advocates of the broader exemptions for military personnel already have pointed out potential inequities in the legislation as cleared by Congress and signed by the President with regard to the restricted tax exemption for enlisted men in combat and the $200 provision for officers in the Korean fighting.

It is explained that a Pentagon officer sent into the combat zone on a special inspection mission, for example, might arrive on the last day of one month and depart on the first day of the succeeding month. Under terms of the new legislation, this officer would be entitled to a deduction of $400.

However, in another theoretical—although entirely plausible case—an infantry combat officer might arrive in Korea early in one month, be severely wounded shortly after his arrival and be evacuated within the same month to a general hospital in the United States. That officer would be entitled only to a $200 tax exemption, since he was in the combat zone only one month.

Critics of the limiting tax exemption also cite the traditional policy of Congress to provide benefits for Service personnel on a service-wide basis without regard to specific assignment.

What is apparent in the passage of the legislation to provide the combat zone tax exemptions was the desire of Congress and the President to provide some sort of "hazardous duty" payment to personnel in action against the enemy.

As a result, there is speculation that when Congress resumes its sessions, key legislators, cognizant of particular Service needs and long-standing policies, will strive for passage of a Service-wide tax exemption measure, such as was the case during World War II, and additionally will seek approval of "hazardous duty" pay for persons in combat, particularly foot soldiers of the Army and Marine Corps ground units.

The fighting in Korea to date has been marked by a vast preponderance of casualties among ground troops, who do not now receive any "hazardous duty" pay reward.

This issue of "hazardous duty" pay for all Servicemen is known to be under study at top Pentagon levels and is likely to be raised when Congress resumes late in November.

Meantime, as a result of the increased tax-rate now enacted into law, all Service personnel, except those in the combat area to be named in the forthcoming Executive Order, face reduced take-home pay at a time when their living costs are rising out of proportion to the rest of the population.

As a result of the current expansion program, thousands of Service personnel are receiving sudden transfer orders, necessitating great financial outlays, particularly with regard to the critical problem of finding new housing. In many instances, personnel of the Armed Forces, unable to find suitable quarters for their families adjacent to their new assignments, are being forced to maintain their families elsewhere at great financial expense, aside from the personal hardships of prolonged separation from loved ones.

These factors, it is believed, will be called to attention of Congress by proponents of legislation to extend the income tax exemption for personnel in combat to all officers and enlisted men in the Armed Forces.

Military leaders, cognizant of present and impending financial hardships and desirous of safeguarding the long-standing principle of equal benefits for all Service personnel, are expected to press hard for a broader income tax exemption.

At the same time, indications are that renewed efforts will be made to have written into the law of the land a provision for "hazardous duty" pay for all persons in combat action.

The service exemptions as finally enacted reads as follows:

"Sec. 202. Income Tax Exemptions for Members of the Armed Forces Serving in Combat Areas.

"(a) Exclusion From Gross Income: Section 22 (b) (13) (relating to exclusions from gross income) is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(13) Additional allowance for certain members of the armed forces.—

"(A) Enlisted Personnel: Compensation received for active service as a member below the grade of commissioned officer in the armed forces of the United States for any month during any part of which such member served in a combat zone after 24 June 1950, and prior to 1 January 1952.

"(B) Commissioned Officers: In the case of compensation received for active service as a commissioned officer in the armed forces of the United States for any month during any part of which such officer served in a combat zone after 24 June 1950, and prior to 1 January 1952, so much of such compensation as does not exceed $200.

"(C) Definitions: For the purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) the term "commissioned officer" does not include a commissioned warrant officer;

"(ii) the term "combat zone" means any area which the President of the United States by Executive Order designates, for the purposes of this paragraph, as an area in which armed forces of the United States are or have (after 24 June 1950) engaged in combat;

"(iii) service is performed in a combat zone only if performed on or after the date designated by the President by Executive Order as the date of the commencing of combatant activities in such zone, and on or before the date designated by the President by Executive Order as the date of the termination of combatant activities in such zone; and

"(iv) the term "compensation" does not include pensions and retirement pay."

"(b) Withholding of Income Tax on Wages: Effective with respect to wages paid after 31 October 1950, section 1621 (a) (relating to definition of wages for income tax withholding purposes) is hereby amended by inserting before paragraph (2) thereof the following:

"(1) for active service as a member of the armed forces of the United States performed prior to 1 January 1952, in a month during any part of which such member performed service in a combat zone as determined under section 22 (b) (13), or."

Slot Machine Ban Fails

The bill to prohibit interstate transportation of slot machines, which carried a provision forbidding them on Federal reservations, failed of passage in the closing days of the 2d Session of the 81st Congress.

A prolonged filibuster by Senate George W. Malone (R-Nev) prevented its consideration. However, it remains on the Senate calendar as pending business when the Congress reconvenes in November. The provision which would operate to ban slot machines on Army, Navy, or Air Force stations reads as follows:

"Sec. 5. It shall be unlawful to manufacture, recondition, repair, sell, transport, possess, or use any gambling device in the District of Columbia, the Territories and possessions of the United States, on any lands reserved or acquired for the use of the United States and under the exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction thereof or within Indian country as defined in 18 United States Code 1151."

Promotions Slated For USAF Officers

Air Force officials indicated this week that by mid-October an announcement pertaining to specific criteria for temporary promotions to field grade ranks will be released.

At the same time, it was stated that the selection board considering permanent majors for promotion to the rank of permanent lieutenant colonel probably will complete its work early next month.

Further, the Air Force anticipates that the next few weeks will see work completed on the selection of approximately 5,000 officers for temporary promotion to the ranks of first lieutenant and captain.

The forthcoming field grade temporary promotions will likely result in advancement of hundreds of officers to fill vacancies created by the expansion program. It is recalled that USAF Headquarters dispatched to field commanders "planning criteria" to ascertain how many officers might be eligible for advancement. Reports from the field were received late this month.

It has been emphasized repeatedly that the planning criteria sent to the field may not be the actual criteria to be used for the selection of officers for field grade promotions.

Printed initially in the JOURNAL issue of 2 Sept., these planning criteria are reprinted herewith as follows:

To Colonel: All Air Reserve or Air National Guard officers currently serving on active duty in the grade of Lieutenant Colonel who hold valid commissions as Colonel in the Air Reserve or Air National Guard.

All Regular and Non-Regular officers serving on active duty in grade of Lieutenant Colonel, regardless of permanent grade, whose date of initial appointment in that grade is prior to 1 July 1945 and who served on active duty in the grade of Lieutenant Colonel or higher at least 20 months prior to 30 June 1947.

To Lieutenant Colonel: All Reserve or Air National Guard officers currently serving on active duty in grade of Major who hold valid commissions as Lieutenant Colonel in the Air Reserve or ANG.

All Regular and Non-Regular officers on active duty in the grade of Major, regardless of permanent grade, whose date of initial appointment in that grade is prior to 1 Nov. 1945 and who served on active duty in grade of Major or higher at least 16 months prior to 30 June 1947.

To Major: All Reserve or ANG officers currently serving on active duty in the grade of Captain who hold valid commissions as Major in the Air Reserve or ANG.

All Regular and Non-Regular officers currently serving on active duty as Captains, regardless of the permanent grade, whose date of initial appointment in that grade is prior to 1 Nov. 1945 and who served on active duty in the grade of Captain or higher at least 16 months prior to 30 June 1947.

Permanent Promotion Board

The board considering permanent majors for promotion to lieutenant colonel, convened earlier this month, has been reviewing the records of approximately 2,400 officers on the USAF promotion list.

For the first time, the Air Force is employing the "best qualified" and not the "fully qualified" method of selection for permanent promotions below the rank of colonel. As a result, it is foreseen that the pass-over rate may be higher than usual.

In addition to the 2,400 USAF Promotion List permanent majors, about 100 on the Medical, Dental Veterinary, Medical Service and Chaplains lists will be considered for permanent advancement to the rank of lieutenant colonel. For these approximate 100 officers, the "fully qualified" selection method will be employed.

Actual promotion resulting from action of this selection board, the Air Force has said, will be made over the next 18 months to two years, dependent upon AF authorizations and requirements.

The following officers will be eligible for promotion consideration:

1. All permanent grade majors on the USAF promotion list, including WAFs, whose dates of rank as permanent grade major are prior to 2 July 1948—approximately 2,400. All permanent grade majors who meet this eligibility requirement will have completed at least 10 years' promotion list service prior to 31 Dec. 1951. Officers selected from this number will be made under a "best qualified" method of selection.

2. Permanent grade majors on other Air Force promotion lists may be as follows:

Promotion Lists	Probable Extent of Consideration
Medical	Through Humphreys, James W. Jr., 19928A
Dental	Through Franklin, William W., 12885A
Veterinary	Through Scott, Rolland O., 18985A

Included among the officers considered will be 71 deferred by a similar selection board last December. Any officer among this group not recommended by the present board will be separated from the service, as required by the Officer Personnel Act.

Junior Officer Promotions

As work was being speeded on the temporary promotions to and within field grade ranks and as the selection board considering officers for permanent promotions to lieutenant colonel was completing its task, processing of about 5,000 promotions to temporary ranks of first lieutenant and captain also was nearing an end.

The Air Force reported in mid-August, in announcing plans for the 5,000 promotions to first lieutenant and captain, that this will mark the first step in adjusting the grades of personnel on active duty to those of Reserve officers being recalled.

The following officers are eligible for consideration for promotion to the grade of Captain:

1. All Reserve and Air National Guard officers serving on extended active duty as first lieutenants who hold a captain's grade in their Reserve component.

2. All other officers serving as first lieutenants, whose date of initial appointment in that grade was prior to 1 March 1946, and who served at least 12 months on active duty as a first lieutenant prior to 30 June 1947. This eligibility criteria is designed to provide these officers fair and equitable consideration with their contemporaries who possess Reserve and Air National Guard appointments in the grade of Captain.

For promotion to the grade of first lieutenant:

1. All Reserve or Air National Guard first lieutenants serving on active duty as second lieutenants, Major Air Force commanders are being delegated authority to promote qualified officers who meet this criteria.

On the basis of the foregoing criteria, field commanders prepared and submitted lists of recommendations to USAF Headquarters. There, consolidated lists are now being prepared for early release.

Marine Fliers Praised

Lt. Gen. L. C. Shepherd, jr., USMC, took official recognition of the magnificent accomplishments of the Marine aviators working in close support of the Marine ground forces.

The following message was sent by the General to the Commanding General First Marine Air Wing on 19 Sept.:

"The Marine Air Ground Team has never performed with greater precision and deadly effectiveness than during the operations for seizure of Inchon and the Kimpo airfield. Please accept for yourself, your officers and men, my sincere congratulations on a most difficult task superbly accomplished."

Battlefield Promotions

The Far East Command has disclosed that as of the middle of this month, 96 enlisted men and seven warrant officers have received battlefield commissions for "meritorious service and leadership in action in Korea."

All division commanders in Korea have been given authority to award second lieutenant appointments for battlefield heroism.

Meantime, the 25th Infantry Division announced that six sergeants and two warrant officers have received battlefield commissions for meritorious service and leadership in action on the Korean front.

The men, all commissioned in the grade of second lieutenant, and their former rank, are as follows: Warrant Officers Richard L. Sears, and Alfonso Turner, and Master Sergeants John F. Land, James J. Turner, Homer E. Hill, George B. Hawkins, Michael Allegra, and Charles E. Jones.

Camp Kilmer was used during World War II and became an inactive installation 1 April 1950.

CWO Franklin Retires

Chief Warrant Officer Charles H. Franklin will retire today, 30 Sept., in the grade of colonel after 33 years continuous Federal service.

He has had a colorful career with the Army which included service as Chief Clerk in the Office of the Judge Advocate General of the American Expeditionary forces in World War I; in the Office of the General of the Armies John J. Pershing, as secretary to the General of the Army George C. Marshall, then a colonel and aide-de-camp to General Pershing. He also served in the Historical Section of the Army War College, and since 1942 in the Adjutant General's Office as Chief of the Precedent and History Section.

Colonel Franklin, who is a native of Tennessee, served 10 years in the Tennessee National Guard in addition to his 33 years with the Regular Army.

Field Forces Inspectors

General Mark W. Clark, Commanding General, has named Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, Maj. Gen. George D. Shea and Brig. Gen. Riley F. Ennis to fill newly created positions as Inspectors of Infantry, Artillery and Armor with the Office, Chief of Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va.

It is recalled that the recently enacted Army Organization Act of 1950 abolished permanently the long-vacant posts of Chief of Infantry, Chief of Field Artillery, Chief of Cavalry, etc.

There has been much speculation that the demands of the huge Army expansion program would require assignment of skilled officers to supervise branch training, research and development as was done by the former Chiefs of arms and branches.

However, the new Field Forces Inspectors are not expected to have the same degree of authority as was held by the Chiefs of Infantry, Cavalry, etc., but doubtless to a lesser measure will duplicate some of the duties performed under pre-World War II branch organizations.

The Inspectors will study and analyze operations within each branch. General Clark said:

"Our new inspectors are highly-trained senior officers with wide experience in their respective arms and the combined arms. All are combat veterans. They will make recommendations for necessary action to improve the effectiveness of their respective combat arms."

"The basic concept of our military planning is team work—the inspectors for the combat arms will help us build a fighting team of Infantry, Artillery, and Armor," General Clark emphasized. "They will work closely with all sections of OCAFF. Each inspector under the direction of the Chief of Army Field Forces has the primary function of determining by inspections in the field the degree of effectiveness of units and installations in accomplishing their training missions and the degree of combat readiness of units."

General O'Daniel, the new Field Forces Infantry Inspector comes to Fort Monroe from Moscow, USSR, where he has been U. S. Military Attache since June, 1948. The General started his military career as a sergeant in 1916. In World War II, he commanded the Third ("The Rock of the Marne") Infantry Division. As a part of General Clark's Fifth Army, the Third Division took part in the battles for Sicily and Italy. After the war, General O'Daniel was Commandant of the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia.

General Shea, the Artillery Inspector, comes to Fort Monroe from Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif. He was the war-time commander of the XIX Corps Artillery from September 1943, at Camp Gordon, Georgia, Camp Polk, Louisiana, and throughout its operations from the Normandy Beachhead to the Elbe River (May 1945). He then saw service in the Philippines and in Japan and later was Commanding General of the Philippine Command. General Shea was at Fort Monroe early this year as a member of the Army Equipment Panel. The responsibilities of the Inspector for Artillery include Field Artillery, Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missile matters.

General Ennis, the new Armor Inspector, comes to Fort Monroe from Mexico City where he was Army Attache and Senior Military Attache to the American Embassy. Before United States entry in World War II he acted as an observer in England and the Middle East where he saw service with British armored units. Later while on duty at Headquarters, AGF, he assisted in the organization of the Desert Training Center. He was assigned to the 12th Armored Division and saw combat with that division in France and Germany. After the war, he served with the War Department General Staff.

1st Cavalry Decorations

In a brief ceremony near the front lines four 1st Cavalry Division artillery officers were awarded Silver Stars by Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, Division Commander, for gallantry in action.

The decorations were awarded to Lt. Col. William H. Harris, commander of an artillery battalion, and three of his officers: Capt. Clarence Shay, Capt. William H. Hamilton, and 1st Lt. Alan A. Brister.

Deputy Defense Sec'y.

Mr. Robert A. Lovett, who served as Assistant Secretary of War for Air during World War II and later was Under Secretary of State, was appointed Deputy Secretary of Defense by President Truman on 28 Sept. His recess appointment is subject to confirmation by the Senate.

Mr. Lovett entered Government service in December 1940, when he was appointed special assistant to the Secretary of War. In April 1941, he was named Assistant Secretary of War for Air, in which capacity he served until the end of World War II. He was Under Secretary of State under General George C. Marshall, recently-appointed Secretary of Defense, from July 1947 to January 1949, after which he returned to the New York investment banking firm of Brown Brothers, Harriman and Company, of which he had been a partner for several years.

In 1916, Mr. Lovett joined the Aerial Coast Patrol Unit #1, organized by F. Trubee Davison (the first Assistant Secretary of War for Air) as a naval reserve group, and learned to fly at Port Washington, L. I. This unit was absorbed by the Navy at the outbreak of World War I.

As a naval ensign pilot Mr. Lovett went to France in August 1917. There he won his French wings flying land planes, at Tour, in the autumn of 1917. Thereafter he established a U. S. Naval Air Service Transition Flying School in the fall of 1917.

From November 1917 to January 1918 he was assigned to the Royal Navy Air Service at Felixstowe, England and piloted flying boats on the North Sea submarine patrol and convoy patrol.

He then served with the R.N.A.S., flying night bombers in France against the German submarine bases of Bruges, Zeebrugge and Ostend and marshalling yards and shops in occupied Belgium and France. He became a strong advocate of bombing and on the basis of reports prepared at that time the Navy Department formed the Northern Bombing Group and Mr. Lovett commanded U. S. Naval Air Squadron #1. It was based at St. Inglevert and was equipped with night bombers. During this period he received the Navy Cross and was promoted to Lieutenant Commander. He returned from France in January 1919.

In 1921 he began a business career as a clerk in the National Bank of Commerce and eventually became a partner of Brown Brothers, Harriman and Company. He was a director and member of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company and the Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad Company, trustee and member of the executive committee of the New York Trust Company; and director of the St. Joseph and Grand Island Railway Company, the Commercial Pacific Cable Company, the Provident Fire Insurance Company, Royal Exchange Assurance of London and the U. S. Guarantee Company.

Mr. Lovett's personal interest in aviation continued throughout his business career. He was one of the group of aviation enthusiasts who financed an experimental plane in hopes of winning back the Schneider Cup. On annual trips abroad he carefully studied and kept abreast of developments in European commercial and military aviation.

In 1940 Mr. Lovett resigned all his business connections and obtained leave of absence from his philanthropic and education interests, and accepted, on 19 Dec., an appointment as Special Assistant to the Secretary of War.

In this position, and following his appointment on 19 April 1941 as Assistant Secretary of War for Air, he continued his advocacy of striking power in the air and prevailed upon aircraft manufacturers to pool their plants and experience in the production of long-range bombers. In May and June 1943

Mr. Lovett inspected air operations in United Kingdom and North Africa.

In December 1945 Mr. Lovett resigned as Assistant Secretary of War for Air and again became a partner of Brown Brothers, Harriman and Company.

Navy Ships in Landing

The names of the landing ships which participated in the Inchon invasion have been announced by Vice Adm. Arthur D. Struble, who was commander of the invasion fleet.

First ship to touch Red beach in the landings was LST 859. The landing ship was taken under fire by enemy batteries on the way into the beach and one man was killed and four wounded. One mortar shell hit some diesel cargo on the deck and started a fire which spread throughout the ship. Lt. Comdr. J. C. Wilson, commander of the LST Assault Group, who was aboard the 859, was decorated with the Silver Star for heroism by General MacArthur.

Other ships in the LST Assault Group which sustained losses were LST 847—one dead, four wounded; LST 913—one dead, six wounded. Five additional LST's were in the group: LST 799, LST 883, LST 898, LST 973 and LST 975. All eight landed under heavy machine gun fire.

Ships which carried Marines on the early morning assault on Wolmido were the LSD USS Fort Marion; Attack Destroyer Transports, USS Diachenko, USS Horace A. Bass, USS Wantuck. The Wolmido Attack Force was commanded by Capt. Norman W. Sears, Chief of Staff to Rear Adm. J. H. Doyle, the Amphibious Force Commander.

Capt. R. C. Peden commanded the Tractor Group which landed on Blue Beach. Ships included in the group were the LSTs: 611, 715, 742, 802, 845, 1048, 1123, 1134 and 1138.

Capt. V. A. Roane commanded the Transport Division which included the USS Cavalier, USS George Clymer, USS Herrico, USS Pickaway, USS Noble, USS Union, USS President Jackson, USS Alshain, USS Achernar, USS Oglethorpe, USS Seminole, USS Thurban, USS White-side, and USS Washburn.

Navy Short on Plasma

The Navy revealed this week that it is running short on stocks of blood plasma and consequently must make every effort to use up current stocks which are nearing or have passed their expiration date.

In a directive to all Naval activities, authority was given "until further notice" to use "any dried plasma on hand . . . regardless of the expiration date," and "provided there are no apparent defects in diluent containers or recipient sets."

Complete Recall Phase

All organized reserve ground units of the Marine Corps have reported to initial deployment stations for extended active duty, the Corps said on 26 Sept.

The mobilization, completed in 43 days, included 138 separate units in 126 cities, one in Honolulu. Along with the male units were 13 attached platoons, in many cities, of women reserves who were deployed originally to Camp Lejeune, N. C., and San Francisco.

Male reservists went initially to Camp Lejeune and to Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Volunteer Marine Corps Reservists, the great majority of whom are veterans of active duty in the armed forces, are following the organized units to camp. Classification offices have been working "day and night," the Marine Corps said, screening each officer and man as to his training and capabilities. Training is tailored according to the reservists' military proficiency. Those requiring basic training are sent to "boot camp."

Brig. Gen. M. B. Twining, commanding general of the Training and Replacement Command at Camp Pendleton, who was recently promoted to his new rank, said that the job "has been made easier by the reserves who showed they haven't forgotten how to accustom themselves to military life."

RDB Navy Secretary

Capt. Steadman Teller, USN, has been appointed Navy Secretary of the Research and Development Board, Department of Defense. The appointment was announced by William Webster, Chairman of the Board. Captain Teller succeeds Rear Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, who has been recalled to sea duty in the Far Eastern theater.

Prior to his new appointment, Captain Teller served with the Bureau of Ordnance, as Program Director (Aviation Ordnance). He commanded the aircraft carrier USS Boxer from June 1948 to August 1949. From September to December 1945 he served as the Navy member of the U. S. Strategic Bombing Survey, after which he became Chief of the Guided Missile Section in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations, Navy Department.

Captain Teller has been associated with the Research and Development Board during the past year, having represented the Navy on the Committees on Aeronautics and Ordnance. A member of the wartime Guided Missiles Committee of the Joint New Weapons Committee, Joint Chiefs of Staff, he also worked actively with the Board's Committee on Guided Missiles at the inception of the Joint Research and Development Board, forerunner of the present Research and Development Board.

Brig. Gen. R. W. Crichlow is the Army Secretary and Brig. Gen. J. F. Phillips the Air Force Secretary of the Research and Development Board.

Navy Personnel

Lt. W. W. Smith, MSC, will be transferred on 1 Oct. from the National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., to the Naval Hospital, Charleston, S. C. He will be relieved in his present assignment by Lt. (jg) R. A. Edlund, now stationed at the Naval Hospital, San Diego.

Marine Selection Boards

Subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Navy, the Marine Corps will convene three selection boards during October and November.

Tentative dates, as listed on the precept approved by the Marine Commandant, are as follows:

5 Oct.—Major General
12 Oct.—Brig. General
5 Nov.—Col. and Lt. Col.

The Marine Corps said that the zone for promotion to major general will be readied sometime next week if the precept is approved by the Navy Secretary.

No boards for junior officers will be convened until after 1 Jan.

Reserve Training Course

The Marine Corps Schools at Quantico, Va., have been directed to establish a Reserve Officers' Training Course with the main purpose of training infantry platoon commanders.

Ordered established by the Marine Commandant, General Clifton B. Cates, the course will function "to train junior officers of the Marine Corps Reserve in subjects pertaining to the duties and responsibilities of a Marine officer with particular emphasis on the duties and responsibilities of an infantry platoon commander." It will be conducted by the Special Training Regiment at Quantico, and it is expected that the first class will be convened on 9 Oct. and completed about 22 Dec.

Marine War Memorial

General Clifton B. Cates, Marine Corps Commandant, has made the first contribution to a fund for a Marine Corps memorial to be erected in the vicinity of the Nation's Capital.

The initial donation was made by General Cates to Col. J. W. Moreau, Ret., secretary and member of the board of directors of the Marine Corps War Memorial Foundation, Inc.

General Cates said "Many Marines, for years, have wished that a fitting tribute to the Corps might be erected in the Nation's capital," and that he has given his "whole-hearted support to this undertaking." Such a memorial, he said, "will serve as an eternal tribute to our fallen comrades and as a perpetual reminder of the service of the Marine Corps to our country."

The memorial, standing 110 feet high, will depict the Iwo Jima flag raising. It was sculptured by Felix de Weldon.

The Marine Corps said that the campaign will begin officially on 2 Oct., and that membership in the foundation during the first phase will be limited to Marine officers and men now on active duty.

Unification Tested

The wisdom of unifying the Armed Forces "has been tested in Korea, and confirmed," Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews declared in an address at Chicago last week end.

Mr. Matthews said that it was the combination of the foot soldier, the combat ship and the airplane "functioning in mutual support of one another, that has made our Korean campaign possible."

He said, however, that unification "is not alone sufficient to win the war of ideals," and pointed out to the convention members of the National Consumers Finance Association, that "it can be as fatal to lose a cold war as to lose a shooting war."

The Navy Secretary praised Louis Johnson, former Secretary of Defense, and said that "The passage of time and the impersonal judgment of history will unquestionably bring to him in true perspective appropriate recognition of his unprecedented contribution to our national security and the national welfare."

He said that Mr. Johnson had "resolutely and fearlessly" done "the unpopular thing at the inopportune time," but that the final result was an Army, Navy and Air Force "capable of swinging into prompt and effective action."

Shift Gen. Watson

Announced previously as the new commanding officer for the California Military District, Brig. Gen. Leroy H. Watson has now been assigned command of Ft. Lewis, Wash., where he will succeed Brig. Gen. F. L. Hayden, who has been given an undisclosed post.

Oriskany Commissioned

The Navy's most modern aircraft carrier, the USS Oriskany (CV-34), was commissioned this week, one month ahead of schedule, at the New York Naval Shipyard.

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, delivered the principal address at the commissioning ceremonies. He said that "all practicable improvements to facilitate the operation of the latest carrier aircraft" have been incorporated in the Oriskany, and that she will "soon be ready, if needed, to join her older sisters . . . in the fighting off Korea."

The powerful new carrier was authorized in 1942, and her keel was laid on 1 May 1944. She was launched in October 1945, but her completion was delayed and the Navy later decided on an extensive remodeling and modernization program for the carrier in light of developments in Naval aviation.

Admiral Sherman said that the flattop is "the latest embodiment of the tactical and technological developments applicable to a ship of her class."

Among the changes which set the Oriskany apart from other Essex class carriers are a heavier strength flight deck to take care of heavier aircraft, larger catapults, larger capacity elevators, reduced topside structure, new radar and radio antennae, and blisters to compensate for added weight. She will be the first carrier to use escalators to the flight deck.

Newly assigned commanding officer of the vessel is Capt. Percy H. Lyon, 48-year old aviator. A 1925 graduate of the Naval Academy, Captain Lyon commanded an escort carrier in the Pacific during World War II. His executive officer is Comdr. Frederick N. Howe.

Rear Adm. Walter S. DeLany, Commandant of the Third Naval District, ordered the vessel placed in commission, and she was placed in commission by Captain Lyon.

Eight hundred eighty-eight feet long, with a beam of 129 feet and a displacement of 37,000 tons, the Oriskany will carry a crew of approximately 1,700 enlisted personnel and 85 officers in addition to the personnel of the air group which will operate aboard her.

The carrier is named for the Revolutionary War Battle of Oriskany fought in the Mohawk Valley, 6 Aug. 1777, at the site of the present City of Rome, New York. This battle was the decisive conflict which marked the turning point of seven years of war for American Independence.

After the Oriskany was placed in commission, representatives of several civic and patriotic groups presented gifts to the ship. A certificate of $2,000 was presented by the children of the Mohawk Valley Schools to be used to purchase fixtures and furnishings for the welfare of the crew.

Admiral Sherman told the crew that what their ship becomes "will depend upon the leadership of her officers and upon the morale training and discipline of her men." He said that they were "fortunate" in their ship, and in their "opportunity for active service afloat."

Sgt. Commissioned

M/Sgt. Johnnie B. Stevens of Headquarters Eighth Army, has been commissioned a 2d Lieutenant after having been promoted from Sergeant First Class to Master Sergeant on 16 August.

A veteran of more than 10 years' service, Lieutenant Stevens has spent most of his time with parachute troops. In the Normandy invasion he and nine other pathfinders landed ahead of the main body and set up radar equipment to guide the landing of troops.

Air University

The Air Force has announced a new program to meet current requirements for training officers in all phases of command and staff procedure. The program previously carried out under the Air University at several bases, will be concentrated at Maxwell AFB, Montgomery, Ala.

The program includes courses and modified curriculum that were offered formerly at Tyndall AFB, Panama City, Fla., and Craig AFB, Selma, Ala., as well as at Maxwell AFB. Curtailment of courses at Tyndall and Craig was announced last 22 July, and these bases have been assigned to the Air Training Command for flying and technical training.

The following courses and schedules are planned for the new program:

Air War College—Starting 8 Jan. 1951, two courses of five and one-half months each will be conducted each year. Approximately 135 Air Force officers and representatives of other services will attend each course.

Officers eligible for this course will include regular officers with less than 18 years' promotion list service, serving in the grades of colonel and lieutenant colonel, who hold the permanent grade of major or above. Also eligible will be reserve officers on active duty in the grades of colonel, who are under 43 years of age.

Formerly, each Air War College course lasted 10 months, with the same quota of students.

Regular Course, Air Command Staff School—will be opened 8 Jan. 1951, with a student body of 185 officers.

Eligible to attend will be regular officers serving as lieutenant colonels or majors with less than 13 years' promotion service, and those USAFR officers serving on extended active duty in the grades of lieutenant colonel and major, who have not reached their 38th birthday as of the starting date of the class.

Classes for the Regular Course will be of three and one-half months' duration and will be held three times yearly. Previously, the course was of five months' duration and was attended by 450 officers.

Squadron Officer Course—formerly the Air Tactical School, will include six classes per year of two months' duration each. Classes will open 23 Oct. 1950, with 225 students in each class. Officers eligible to attend must have more than one but less than five years' active federal commissioned service. The Air Tactical School, formerly located at Tyndall Air Force Base, had a course lasting sixteen weeks and a student body of 750 officers.

Other courses of the new Air Command and Staff School program, together with the number of classes per year, duration of each class, number of students, and starting dates, include:

Communications—Electronics Staff Officer Course—three classes of three and one-half months each, 58 students, 8 Jan. 1951.

Logistics Staff Officer Course—three classes of three and one-half months each, 70 students, 8 Jan. 1951.

Comptroller Staff Officer Course—three classes of three and one-half months each, 76 students, 8 Jan. 1951.

Judge Advocate General Course—three classes of three months each, 55 students, 8 Jan. 1951.

Inspector Course—eight classes of six weeks each, 35 students, 8 Jan. 1951.

Academic Instructor Course—seven classes of six weeks each, 84 students, 2 Oct. 1950.

Selection of personnel for the above six courses will be determined by military and civilian experience in the particular fields.

bardment strategy. The staff of the classification section worked 24-hour shifts to screen hundreds of incoming officers and airmen for assignment to the group. The civilian personnel office teamed with activity reminiscent of World War II days as scores of workers were processed for jobs in the maintenance, supply and administrative fields of the program. In the midst of this vast reshuffle of personnel and materiel, the four engine superforts took to the air for the first pilot transition training flights.

The most solid foundation of any flying school, be it pilot or combat crew training, is experienced maintenance personnel. From Chanute Air Force Base, Ill., the Air Training Command's technical center, came five C-47's as "winged classrooms" to Randolph Air Force Base. Several tons of training aids, consisting of 25 separate units of elaborate mock-ups and cutaways of B-29 features, were swiftly unloaded and arranged into a seven-phase training course for the ground crews. More than 70 former T-6 and B-25 light bomber mechanics are presently enrolled in the 80 hour instructions in the different B-29 maintenance and repair aspects. Eleven enlisted instructors and one officer make up this highly efficient mobile training unit.

It has been less than a month since Randolph Air Force Base was ordered to conduct a combat crew training school. It received its directives at a time when personnel strength was on the decrease because of many transfers to Korea and other commands. Despite this handicap and without interruptions of its aviation cadet curriculum, the base has prepared itself rapidly for its added responsibilities.

Soon the first combat crews will arrive. They will come here as individuals, but they will leave as a team three months later. Each member of a B-29 crew is an expert in his profession. The pilot and co-pilot are experienced fliers. The navigator and bombardier are graduates of their respective schools as are the crew chief, flight engineer, gunner, radio and radar operators. In three months and approximately 150 flying hours these men are taught to become a unit, to operate not as individuals but as a team. As such they will be assigned upon completion of their training to man a superfortress of the Strategic Air Command.

The number of crews to be trained here has not yet been determined by Air Force Headquarters in Washington. How many B-29's will be stationed at this base, too, is a matter for the high command to decide and release. One thing, however, is certain. There will be enough crews and enough planes to make the new primary mission of Randolph Air Force Base a vital factor in the nation's power.

(The above article was written as of 31 Aug., 1950, by General McDaniel at the request of THE JOURNAL. General McDaniel enlisted in the Regular Army in 1919 and served as a private, cadet sergeant, aerial flier, and technical sergeant at Kelly Field, Tex.; in July, 1923, he was appointed a second lieutenant of the Air Service in the Regular Army. He has had extended experience in various phases of flight training. After the war, where he served with the Far East Air Forces and as deputy commander of the Seventh Air Force in the South Pacific, he became commanding general of the Aerial Observer Bombardier School, Mather AFB, Calif., and commander of Mather AFB.)

81st Fighter Wing

Col. Robert F. Harris was recently assigned Executive Officer of the 81st Fighter-Interceptor Wing, it was announced today by Col. G. E. Pinkston, Commanding Officer, at Larson AFB, Wash.

Colonel Harris came to Moses Lake from Hamilton AFB, Calif., where he was Director of Operations Fourth Air Force.

Air National Guard

The Air National Guard will be reorganized in the near future on the basis of the Regular Air Force's "wing-base" organizational structure, according to an announcement by General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff.

The change in organization is designed to increase the flexibility and state of readiness of Air National Guard units and provide for their ready integration into the USAF.

At present the Air Guard units are organized along the lines of the World War II structure in which two or three tactical groups were assigned to a single wing. Under this organization the tactical groups and service elements were under separate commanders.

The "wing-base" organization, now in force throughout the Air Force, provides for assignment of a single tactical group to a wing headquarters along with various supporting medical, service, transportation and base operating elements joined in a single autonomous unit.

Thus, a single wing embraces all elements required to both service a combat group and to operate the base from which the wing operates. This structure provides for greater maneuverability of units.

Under the present organization there are 12 National Guard Wings, 27 Tactical Groups and 84 Tactical Squadrons. These units will be reorganized into 27 Combat Wings, each with a single Combat Group. There will be 84 combat squadrons in these groups. Normally there are three squadrons in each group.

Because most of the squadrons of the various ANG wings operate from bases other than those where the wing headquarters are located, certain support elements such as maintenance, supply, motor vehicle and communication elements will be stationed with each squadron to provide for sustained separate squadron operation.

Redesignate AF Command

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, has announced that the Research and Development Command is redesignated as the Air Research and Development Command.

will be needed and also officers of higher rank and greater maturity to fill medical command vacancies.

One member of the Armed Services Committee, after learning that the Far East Command had expressed grave concern over the lack of adequate hospital beds for combat casualties this week, described as a "national scandal" the peril to medical care of Service personnel and their dependents.

Asserting that Dr. Richard L. Meiling, a brigadier general in the Air Force Reserve, now serving in civilian status as Director of Medical Services for the Department of Defense, "is unwilling to arbitrate," the Congressman told THE JOURNAL that Dr. Meiling should resign.

Resignation Foreseen

The early resignation of Dr. Meiling, who championed the closing of the three general hospitals now to be reopened, in addition to advocating closing of the Long Beach, Calif., Naval Hospital and the Oliver AH, in Augusta, Ga., has been freely predicted since the resignation of former Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, who had appointed him to the key medical post.

Previously, Representative Paul Shafer (R-Mich.) and Representative Dewey Short (R-Mo.), ranking minority member of the House Armed Services Committee, have called for Dr. Meiling's departure.

Late last week, during the last moments of Congress' action before its pre-election recess, Representative Philip J. Philbin (D-Mass.), also a member of the Armed Services Committee, declared in a statement prepared for the Congressional Record that "weird, distorted concepts of economy pursued at great cost to the well-being of our gallant heroes, who are so valiantly serving the country, have prevented the maintenance of adequate and proper hospital facilities. There has been little vision and foresight manifested regarding our hospital needs," the Massachusetts legislator declared.

That this charge of lack of foresight was not directed against the Surgeons General of the Armed Forces is evident from the fact that consistently throughout prolonged Congressional hearings, these officers, sometimes at risks to their careers, pleaded for maintaining reserve hospital facilities just in case of such an emergency as the Korean fighting and the concurrent military expansion program.

It is recalled that representatives of both the Army Medical Department and the Medical Department of the Navy, during hearings on the President's post-Korean supplemental defense requests, revealed that Dr. Meiling and his staff again had insisted on cuts in military medical needs as forecast by experienced Service doctors.

THE JOURNAL, issue of 26 Aug., in an article headed "Close Figuring on Care of Casualties," reported how Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, Deputy Surgeon General of the Army, told a House Appropriations subcommittee that whereas the Army Medical Department estimated the supplemental budget requirement at about $27 million, this was cut to $11 million by Dr. Meiling and his aides.

Similarly, in the same issue an editorial, titled "Skimping on Medical Care," reported how Rear Adm. C. A. Swanson, Surgeon General of the Navy, told the same Congressional group that the amount allotted by the Department of Defense represented a deficiency of over $8 million in meeting the requirements of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery.

Dependent Care Threat

Obviously tied in with the reductions in requests for medical funds is a threat to the dependent care program. Members of Congress, particularly those on the House Armed Services Committee, have been outspoken in their defense of the existing policies for dependent care and have indicated that present facilities even should be expanded to insure safeguarding the health of families of men in the Uniformed Services.

During discussion of a bill, introduced by Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D-SC), chairman of the Armed Services hospital subcommittee, to write into legislation a specific proviso for dependent care, Dr. Meiling was less than enthusiastic over the measure. He referred in his testimony to Defense studies regarding a possible "fee basis" or "health insurance" program, but was told emphatically that the Armed Services Committee would have nothing to do with such substitutes for traditional dependent care.

Dr. Meiling's Statement

Meantime, in a statement released on 26 Sept., Dr. Meiling reviewed how military medical facilities have been expanded since outbreak of fighting in Korea. The text of his statement follows:

"In response to inquiries from the press, the following information regarding the adequacy of hospital facilities in the Armed Forces, particularly for the casualties returning from Korea, is furnished.

"On July 1, 1950, the Armed Forces had 37,300 operating beds (staffed and equipped for use) in continental United States. This was increased to 38,067 on August 1; to 43,639 on September 1; and to 49,408 as of October 1, 1950.

"In short, as of 1 October the operating beds in military hospitals in this country will have been increased 12,416 since 1 July, 1950.

"To meet the needs of the Korean action and the military expansion program, 2,545 beds formerly allocated in military hospitals for use by Veterans Administration beneficiaries were or will be returned to military use in August and September and October, 1950. Combined with the above increase of 12,416 beds, the Armed Forces now have provided an additional 14,961 operating beds over 1 July to care for Korean casualties and other military personnel.

"The total mobilization capacity of military hospitals now activated in this country is over 112,000. The mobilization beds include the 49,408 now staffed, plus 62,592 which can be staffed and placed in use as the need arises and personnel to staff them becomes available.

"During the second week of September, 1950, there were approximately 28,500 patients, including soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen, dependents, retired personnel, veterans, and civilians, in military medical treatment facilities in this country.

"Briefly, then, the facts concerning availability of and requirements for hospitalization in military facilities in continental United States are as follows:

Operating beds, 1 October—49,408
Mobilization beds, 1 October—112,000
Patients hospitalized, (2d week of September)—28,500
Vacant operating beds—20,908
Vacant mobilization beds—83,735

"Approximately 3,000 military patients from the Far East Command have been returned to hospitals in this country between July 24 and September 21, 1950. This includes casualties from the Korean theater plus other patients from that command.

"The Department of the Army has retained military control over three closed hospitals located at Valley Forge, Pa.; Waltham, Mass.; and Battle Creek, Mich., as a reserve against future emergencies. In July, the Department of the Army was instructed to keep these hospitals in readiness for immediate reopening. Similarly, the Department of the Navy has retained control over the closed hospital at San Leandro, Calif.

"With the increased flow of patients being returned from Japan and the concurrent expansion of the Armed Forces, need for additional medical care facilities has developed. In accordance with the standard procedure within the Department of Defense, the Department of the Army on 25 September requested authority from the Department of Defense to open the hospital at Valley Forge, Pa. on 1 October, the hospital at Waltham, Mass. on 1 November, and the hospital at Battle Creek, Mich. on 1 December and expand the operating beds in nine other hospitals. This authority was granted.

"The Veterans Administration has offered to make available to the Departments of the Army, Navy and Air Force beds in specialized treatment facilities for the care of blind, deaf, amputee and other types of patients requiring special treatment measures. To date, the three military departments have not submitted requirements for use of these Veterans Administrations facilities.

"A basic policy in the military hospital program is the joint use of military hospitals, by which members of the three military services may be cared for in the nearest hospital, regardless of the service which operates it. In accordance with this policy, the Department of the Navy, which on 1 July was providing 500 beds for Army and Air Force patients, offered to provide 3,880 additional beds to accommodate overseas casualties while the Army was re-opening and staffing 13 new hospitals at military posts in continental United States. This was authorized by the Secretary of Defense 1 September. Currently, some 1,700 Army patients are under care in Navy hospitals."

Costly Reactivations

Nowhere indicated in Dr. Meiling's lengthy statement is any estimate of approximate costs of reopening hospital facilities so recently closed. Aside from the cost to the Government, many Service personnel, who in recent months have been transferred from the temporarily deactivated medical facilities, are likely to be ordered to their former posts again. This will mean considerable expense in moving families and in obtaining housing facilities—another example of how Service personnel are facing higher living costs than the rest of the population as a result of the military situation.

That personnel assigned to the closed installations will be returned to their former assignments is foreseen in the fact that the hospitals are to be reopened as quickly as possible. For example, the Valley Forge AH, likely to be used for specialized care of wounded, is to have 1500 of its 1800 beds ready for occupancy by 1 Oct., with the remaining 300 beds to be ready one month later.

Murphy AH is to be reopened by 1 Nov. and Percy Jones AH, by 1 Dec.

The hospitals which are to be expanded are at Camp Atterbury, Ind.; Camp Carson, Colo.; Ft. Bragg, N. C.; Ft. Benning, Ga.; and Ft. Campbell, Ky.

Casualties from Korea

Meantime, it was reported this week that the Armed Forces are preparing to handle as many as 2000 casualties weekly from the fighting in Korea.

At Fairfield-Suisun, Calif., the Air Force hospital has been increased to 450 staffed beds. Close by, at Mare Island Naval Hospital, 550 beds will be manned, according to press reports this week. In the economy cutback which preceded outbreak of war in Korea, the Mare Island hospital was reduced to a status of only 50 manned beds.

Aviation Medicine School

The Air Force has announced that a portion of the activities of its School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph AFB, San Antonio, Tex., will be transferred to Gunter AFB, Montgomery, Ala., effective on or about 1 Nov. The transfer is being effected to provide facilities for increased professional education.

All medical research activities and professional teaching courses for flight surgeons and aviation medical examiners will continue to be provided at the school's main location at Randolph AFB.

Gunter AFB will be operated as a part of the School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph AFB to provide instruction for flight nurses and aviation physiologists. Instruction of enlisted personnel assigned as aero-medical technicians and specialists, supervisors, and professional services personnel will also be carried out at the Alabama base.

RAF Commander Cited

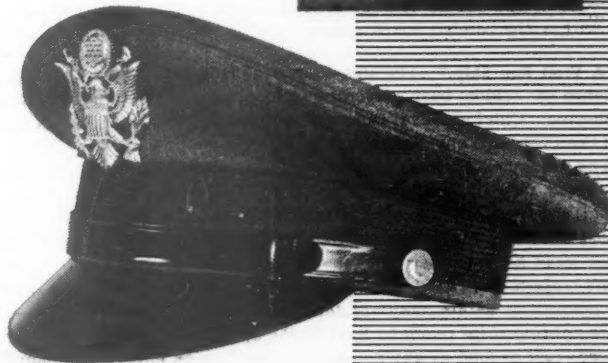

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratmeyer, Commanding General of the Far East Air Forces, has awarded an Air Medal to Wing Commander Peter G. Wykeham-Barnes of the Royal Air Force.

Commander Wykeham-Barnes was cited for "meritorious service while participating in aerial flights as pilot of a B-26 type aircraft delivering numerous strikes against the enemy in Korea in extremely hazardous night intruder missions." The citation concluded: "The skill, fortitude and devotion to duty displayed reflect the highest credit upon Wing Commander Wykeham-Barnes, the Royal Air Force and the United Nations' Forces."

An authority on night combat missions and jet propulsion, the Commander was brought to the Far East at the special request of FEAF because of his past experience in night air warfare. He reported to General Stratmeyer that his appraisal of night intruder missions flown by U. S. FEAF aircraft against the Communists confirms the effectiveness indicated in the daily results.

Avoiding all personal and political bias, its influence will be directed solely to the inculcation of sound military ideas, and to the elevation of the public service in all its departments."—From Vol. 1, No. 1, of the Army and Navy Journal, published August 29, 1863.

SATURDAY, 30 SEPTEMBER 1950

"There is a force loose in the world today which has shown that it relies on force and war as major instruments of its policy. There is no choice for us but to have a defense establishment which will provide no incentive to this Communist threat to begin a war against us."—SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE THOMAS K. FINLETTER.

Care of Wounded. It is significant that the announcement of the reopening of a number of economy-closed Army hospitals was made this week not by the Army but by Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga), chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services. The fact of the matter is that the reopening represents a distinct victory for Mr. Vinson's Committee and particularly for its subcommittee headed by Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D-SC). The original order to close the hospitals was given particular study by the members who at one point asked then Secretary Louis Johnson to postpone the closing dates until their fact finding was completed. This request was not heeded. At that time, well before the Korean flare-up, the committee was particularly concerned with the threat that such closings would force cessation of the traditional medical care of members of Service families. When the Korean war broke out the committee pressed harder for the reactivation of the hospitals, but met with virtually adamant opposition from the Secretary of Defense's Director of Medical Services, Dr. Richard L. Meiling, upon whose recommendations they were originally closed. Now, with General MacArthur expressing concern as to the care of the casualties from Korea, the Committee so increased its pressure upon the Department that despite Dr. Meiling's views the reopening was agreed upon. The Services must thus be grateful to the committee for giving the Surgeons General the means to carry on their fine records of medical care.

Extra Pay for Combat Zones. In enacting the special tax exemptions for personnel on duty in combat zones, Congress was motivated by a desire to do something for the fighting men. However, immersed as they were in the huge task of working up an entirely new fund-raising measure in the last days of the session, they did not have the time to give their plan thorough consideration. When they return in November the entire matter must be overhauled. The present confusing and inequitable tax exemption plan should be replaced by a simple method of excluding all Armed Forces personnel from the payment of Federal income taxes on their service incomes. To carry out their intent of doing something special for the men in combat zones they should broaden the hazard pay provisions of the Career Compensation bill so as to apply its benefits to all who are exposed to the extra-hazards of the war areas. This hazard pay is now properly given to all who fly, jump in parachutes or gliders, or who cruise in submarines. Those exposed to the hazard of duty in a combat zone should also be made eligible. Consideration might also be given to the restoration of the foreign duty pay-differential, so that those who serve at sea and abroad, many within the shadow of the iron curtain, will have this extra recompense. The danger in relying on their tax plan for special treatment of combat zone personnel lies in the unequal treatment of those within the combat zones and the endless confusion in administration.

"A Well Run Ship." The importance of balanced forces and mutual trust and confidence has seldom been presented so forcefully and succinctly as by Admiral Forrest Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, in his address this week at the commissioning of the USS Oriskany. Said the Admiral:

"The fundamental lesson of Korea is the need for balanced forces—balanced forces well trained, well equipped and ready to fight. We must have an Army ready to take the field; we must have an Air Force ready to take the air. Within the Naval service we must have an amphibious striking force, including Marine elements, ground and air—we must have carrier forces modernized and equipped with up-to-date carrier aircraft trained and ready, not only for combat at sea, but also to support the Army in its operations within range of their highly mobile floating bases—we must have surface fighting ships ready to fight in the open sea or in close support of operations on shore—and as long as any potential enemy has an effective submarine flotilla, our naval service must place great emphasis on readiness to destroy submarines and to safeguard the movement of men and materiel over the vital sea lanes. A strong, well balanced naval service, trained and equipped to function effectively in the overall Army-Navy-Air Force team is our purpose.

"You must each achieve skill in your individual duties and all must be welded into a ship's company where all hands have trust and confidence in their shipmates and reliance in their leaders. In a larger sense, we must all meet the same basic requirements—trust and confidence between ships, aircraft and landing forces—trust and confidence between the Fleets, the Armies and the Air Forces—at all levels. If we achieve between the fighting services the same unity of purpose, the same trust and confidence, the same highly skilled teamwork that exists in a well-run ship we will be strong indeed."

Letters to the Editor

Letters expressing individual views and intended for publication should be accompanied by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as evidence of good faith. If the writer desires to omit his name when the letter is published, he should so state. THE JOURNAL may find it necessary to use only extracts from longer letters so that more viewpoints may be represented.

Temporary Promotions

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

"Lt., USA," writing in the 2 Sept. issue of THE JOURNAL, regarding current Department of the Army policy on temporary promotions, is absolutely correct, but has perhaps failed to state the most significant point of all.

The Army recognizes that an injustice exists when a permanent Captain, for example, who is a temporary Lt. Colonel, rates an officer who is a permanent (and temporary) Major, and that such a situation creates resentment and demoralization. What the Army has apparently failed to recognize is that their method of correcting this injustice will directly perpetrate an even greater one and thereby arouse considerable resentment.

Specifically a 1st Lt. (temporary), with nearly six years in grade, who was appointed a Regular Army 2d Lt. last year (via competitive tour, or via direct appointment under Circular 382), is not eligible for consideration for temporary advancement to Captain, while hundreds of Reserve 1st Lts. and RA permanent 1st Lts. with much less time in grade will be eligible. Fair?

While it was, of course, not the intention of the Department of the Army to do so, the net effect of the present policy is to "punish" those officers who were deemed good enough to be appointed in the Regular Army, by withholding them from the eligibility lists for temporary advancement, while literally hundreds of their juniors—both Reserves and Regulars (temporary rank date)—are promoted over their heads.

Perhaps what is urgently needed is a provision for "hardship promotions," whereby officers long in grade and with superior records, who—through the quirks of regulations—failed of advancement heretofore, will not be consistently bypassed by the zones of consideration.

Another Lt., USA

Accrued Leave

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In THE JOURNAL of 9 Sept. 1950 you reported that it is agreed by the Senate Armed Forces Committee that leave credits will be authorized for certain officers retired between 8 Sept. 1939 and 9 Aug. 1946 and that a bill will be acted upon at some future date to accomplish this.

This bill should be broadened to include those officers of the Regular Army retired on 30 Sept. 1934 and denied accrued leave at that time because of lack of funds. Many were recalled to active duty in World War II.

Retired, U. S. Army.

Unjust Taxation

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Taxation of retired personnel with income below $2,000 seems very unjust. I retired a few months ago as a S/Sgt. with 20 years' service and it takes my check and more money to exist with prices the way they are. Prices are high and most wage earners are receiving increased pay. Surely it shouldn't be too much to ask, that retired personnel be exempt from taxation, unless their retired pay exceeds $2,000.

Staff Sergeant.

Service Humor

The Staff Officer

The identity of the individual originally responsible for this penetrating analysis of the Staff Officer's duties is long since lost. Quite probably his native tongue was Latin. Truth, however, outlives Empires. —EDITOR of The Roundel, RCAF publication, from which the following is reprinted.)

Staff officers are generally considered to be a lucky lot. As everyone else in the Service knows, a Staff Officer never actually does anything, except, of course—

1. To decide what is to be done.
2. (a) To tell somebody to do it.
(b) To listen to the various reasons why—
(i) it should be done by somebody else,
(ii) it should be done differently,
(iii) it should not be done at all.
- (c) To override these objections by convincing and conclusive arguments.
3. (a) To follow up and see if the thing has been done.
(b) To discover that it has not been done.
- (c) To inquire why it has not been done.
- (d) To listen to the usual excuses.
- (e) To prepare arguments to overcome these excuses.
4. (a) To follow up again to see if the thing has been done.
(b) To discover that it has been done—inconceivably.
- (c) To explain how it should have been done.
- (d) To conclude that, as long as it has been done at all, it might as well be left as it is.
5. To reflect that he could have done the job correctly himself in twenty minutes, except for the risk of demoralizing everyone else in the Service, who knows that a Staff Officer never actually does anything.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—The Council of Foreign Ministers of the twelve Atlantic Pact nations announced on Tuesday that it had approved the formation of a combined European defense force under a single commander. Immediate steps will be taken to develop this force, but the commander, who presumably will be an American officer, will not be named for the present. Instead, the work of organizing and arranging for the training of the new force will be assigned to a chief of staff and an international staff, representative of the participating countries. The development of the force will be under the general direction of the Standing Group, composed of military leaders of the United States, Great Britain and France.

Speculation is that the supreme commander, to be ultimately chosen by the defense ministers of the Atlantic Pact countries, may be General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, or General Mark W. Clark, all of the United States Army. It is expected that ground troops of the combined force will be commanded by a French general, the naval forces by a British admiral, the strategic air force by an American, and the tactical air force by a Briton.

Details of the arrangements for the creation of the combined force for the defense of Western Europe will be worked out by the defense ministers of the Allied powers, who will meet on 28 October, under the presidency of Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall. The defense ministers will select the Chief of Staff, and ultimately the Supreme Commander, will determine the size and composition of the staff, and suggest the extent and character of the contributions of each country to the combined force.

For the present the Council of Foreign Ministers has deferred decision as to the extent to which West Germany may be represented in the new force. The defense ministers will be asked to study the question and make specific recommendations to the Council. France remains adamant in its opposition to any type of German rearmament, and it may be that the initial contribution of the German Republic will be limited to supplies and services. After the organization of the combined force the question of utilizing German military units will probably be re-examined by the defense ministers and the Council.

Military developments in Korea this week outpaced diplomacy at Lake Success. Delegates to the United Nations were suddenly confronted with the necessity of deciding how to implement the military victory, whether to authorize an expedition into North Korea, what to do about terms of the probable capitulation of the defeated Red aggressors, and how to plan for the political future of the Korean Republic.

Under the sponsorship of Great Britain a resolution was proposed, with the approval of the United States, outlining the program for peace. It would establish a united and an independent Korea, with the assurance of the continued aid of the United Nations. It would provide for a free election of an independent government for all Korea, and it would set up in that country a United Nations Commission to see that this program was carried out.

A protest from Communist China that a Manchurian village, near the Korean border, had been bombed by an American plane, and five Chinese citizens wounded, has been received by the United Nations. American representatives immediately acknowledged that such an incident may have occurred. They expressed regret and agreed that the United States would pay reparations, provided the complaint is substantiated by local investigation by a United Nations Commission. It is unlikely that Red China will permit an international commission to make an inspection of any Manchurian border point.

In an apparently well-rehearsed program, probably developed for propaganda purposes, Soviet Delegate Jacob Malik answered in the affirmative several questions relating to Russian-American relations which were put to him by a Baltimore peace group. By his conciliatory answers Mr. Malik promised that Russia would not use the atom bomb first, and said his country favored general disarmament and international control of atomic weapons, a meeting of the heads of the United States and Russia, obviously Truman and Stalin, and the free exchange of ideas and information between the two countries.

The Baltimore group, while denying any connection with Communism, has been circulating a peace petition somewhat similar to that sponsored by international Reds. Russian press agents in New York were at great pains to give wide publicity to the questions of the peace group and the affirmative replies of Mr. Malik.

While the episode may prove to be a somewhat clumsy method of launching a peace feeler, State Department officials are inclined to regard it as having been staged solely for the purpose of propaganda here and abroad. The Soviet foreign ministry may have had some vain hope that this development might divert world attention from the tremendous blow to Red prestige suffered through the humiliating defeat of the Russian-armed and Russian-trained Communist army in Korea.

It is pointed out that President Truman has always been willing to meet with Stalin in Washington, provided Great Britain and France are represented at the meeting. Proposals of the United States and other powers for international control of atomic weapons have been repeatedly blocked by Russia in the United Nations. As to free interchange of information and ideas the Russian attitude is continuously demonstrated by the constant attempts to jam radio reception in Russia of the Voice of America.

Navy Supercarrier—With the resignation of Defense Secretary Johnson, speculation has developed in shipping circles at Newport News, Va., as to whether the cancelled 65,000-ton super aircraft carrier, the USS United States, will be reinstated. Secretary Johnson stopped construction on the controversial vessel a year ago last April, but the keel of the giant ship, which was laid by the Newport News Shipbuilding Company prior to the stop-work order, is still in place. Some shipbuilders apparently feel that the Navy may re-request construction of the ship now that Defense cutbacks are being revoked.

Reversed Service—When he was in the Army, 2d Lt. Herbert C. Lucas, a recent Air Force OCS graduate, spent much time in the air. He was a paratrooper. Now that he's in the Air Force, Lieutenant Lucas is grounded. He is a non-rated officer.

Ordnance Corps—Col. John H. Walker, USA, has been named deputy chief of the New York Ordnance District. He returned recently from assignment in Germany.

Global Military Notes—Around the world, there were these new developments this week on the defense front:

Australia—Lt. Gen. Sir Edmund Herring, Chief Justice of Victoria, as Director General of Recruiting is in charge of a drive to obtain thousands of additional men for the armed forces. At the time of his appointment last month, Australia had a deficiency of 13,000 for the permanent naval, army and air forces, with 1000 more men needed for the infantry force in Korea. For the citizen forces, 29,000 men were needed.

Australia took another step forward toward self-reliance on manufacture of defense items as the Commonwealth Ordnance Factory at Maribyrnong, Victoria, recently delivered to the Royal Australian Navy the first of a new type of twin Bofors gun mounting, formerly made in Britain. Known as the Staag, the mounting has two Bofors 40-mm. guns each with a high rate of fire power, to be used principally as an anti-aircraft weapon.

Norway—Defense Minister Jens Chr. Hauge, disclosing that during the past four years his country has spent 1,250 million kroner on expansion of military forces, declared that the current defense program is based on strengthening of land and air forces. "The Cabinet," he said, is not overlooking the significance of Naval defense, but in this regard Norway must count mainly on assistance from other North Atlantic Treaty nations."

Canada—The aircraft carrier Magnificent and the destroyers Huron and Micmac are now on a three-month European training cruise, during which concentrated anti-submarine exercises have been conducted under the joint Royal Navy-Royal Air Force anti-submarine training school.

Return Authority to Departments—Although Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall, sworn in only last week, has yet to take any direct action, there were Pentagon rumors this week that he might decentralize somewhat the various prerogatives taken from the Services and put under the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

This might well mean that Service personnel chiefs would assume again some of the authority delegated to the Personnel Policy Board. It is recalled that it was this board which set arbitrary limits on the number of warrant officers the Services could name for the two top warrant pay grades under the Career Compensation Act.

Also, it is known that operations of the Personnel Policy Board sometimes have resulted in delays in implementation of personnel planning. In view of the current emergency, it is felt that Secretary Marshall, himself a famed administrator who is completely intimate with special Service personnel problems, may permit the Army, Navy and Air Force to take more direct action in solving their respective personnel matters.

Similarly, the feeling is that Secretary Marshall will take some authority away from the Defense Director of Medical Services and give broader powers to the Surgeons General of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

This does not mean, of course, that the new Secretary is less of an advocate of Unification than either of his two predecessors. It was at the time that General Marshall was Chief of Staff that preliminary spadework was done toward achieving Unification. What it may mean, however, is that he will seek to reduce the authority of some of the boards and offices which have been set up over the Services.

Meantime, Secretary of Defense Marshall issued the following memorandum continuing in effect all official actions previously taken by or executed in the name of the Secretary of Defense: "All memoranda, directives, delegations of authority, appointments of individuals to stated positions, and all other official actions heretofore taken by or executed in the name of the Secretary of Defense, shall continue to have full force and effect, subject to such modifications, revocations, or other alterations as may hereafter be made by appropriate authority."

The Battleship Fights Back—Relegated in the months before the Korean war to relatively ignoble status as a training ship in a reduced commission status, the Navy's single battleship, the USS Missouri, her mighty guns booming, has fought successfully to win new nautical respect. The Navy has announced that the USS New Jersey is to be taken from mothballs, thus doubling the active BB strength of the U. S.

The 16-inch guns of the USS Missouri, which during a high-speed 11,000-mile voyage from Norfolk, Va., to Samchok, Korea, encountered a hurricane off Cape Hatteras, evaded a tropical storm near Panama and finally rode into Korea waters on the tail of a typhoon, played an important role in the dramatic U.N. offensive.

It is recalled that at the time the "Mighty Mo" was on the mud flats of Hampton Roads earlier this year, there was a widespread feeling that the vessel had outlived its usefulness and should join all the other battleships in the "zipper fleet." It was said then that the battleship might never again play a significant part in sea warfare. What has happened in Korea has demonstrated that at least for the present the battleship still is a powerful offensive factor. Whatever the future may hold, in the Korean fighting the "Mighty Mo" has won a stay of execution for the dreadnaughts.

First for Douglas Plane—The Navy's Douglas Skyraider has achieved another "first" in Korea, where three of the powerful propeller-driven aircraft took off from a carrier with three 2000-pound bombs plus a full load of 20mm ammunition for their machine guns. This marked the first time this plane has been launched for a combat mission with three of the block-buster bombs. The planes were flown by Lt. Comdr. Winston Chick, Lt. (jg) Robert N. Krause and Ens. William C. Bailey.

Army Chaplain Decorated—The Far East Command has announced award of the Bronze Star Medal to Chaplain (Capt.) Emil J. Kapaun, of the 1st Cavalry Division, who rescued a wounded man from an exposed position at a time when litter bearers were not available. Chaplain Kapaun, with another officer, succeeded in evacuating the stricken soldier despite intense enemy machine gun and small arms fire.

New Post for Secretary Marshall—Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall has been named president of the Board of Visitors of Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va. General of the Army Marshall is a 1901 graduate of VMI. He will serve until January, when a regular election will be held. Maj. E. A. Sale, president pro-tem of the board, made the announcement.

USAF Dental Service—Lt. Col. Frederick H. Richardson, jr., has reported for duty at Scott AFB, Ill. Colonel Richardson's previous assignment was at the University of Maryland where he conducted Reserve Officer Training Corps training while taking advanced training in Oral Surgery.

Navy Medical Department—A revised procedure instituted by the Medical Department of the Navy for reporting individual patient statistics has resulted in a large saving of time and money for the Navy. Formerly, statistical data cards were submitted reflecting detailed changes of status of patients, such as transfers from one activity to another, establishment of diagnoses, changes of diagnoses, etc. The new procedure requires only that a card be submitted at the time that a diagnosis of the patient is terminated and all transfers and establishment of diagnoses are reported on the same card that reports the diagnostic disposition.

This revised procedure eliminates all reports relating to the transfer of patients or the establishing of definite diagnoses and permits all data concerning each disease or injury diagnosis to be recorded on one report. As a result there has been a reduction in the time required to prepare the reports and a saving in the number of cards used and filing space required. Another essential achievement is a reduction in clerical work required of the battle units, as in many cases the major responsibility for preparation of this report has been shifted from ships and dispensaries to hospitals.

During the period of 1942 through 1945 approximately 9½ million individual morbidity cards were submitted on approximately 5 million cases of disease and injury. Had the present system been in use at that time there would have been a reduction of approximately 3 million cards. These 3 million cards would form a stack roughly one-half mile high, or nearly six times as tall as the Washington Monument. Since all cards submitted form a permanent record, the new procedure is already showing the effects of the economies achieved.

Accurate detailed statistics concerning the health of the Navy and Marine Corps are not only essential for effective administration of the Medical Department but they also form the basis for many important research projects that contribute to the advancement of medical knowledge.

Army Dental Corps—Col. William D. White retires from active service today, 30 Sept., having attained the age of 60 years on 12 Sept. Colonel White's last station was Chief of Dental Service at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Col. Karl H. Metz has been relieved from duty in the Civilian Components Branch of the Personnel Division, Office of the Surgeon General, and assigned to duty at Camp Breckenridge, Ky. Lt. Col. Henry S. Carroll, DC, has been relieved from duty at Fort Belvoir, Va., and assigned to Camp Edwards, Mass.

Army Chaplains Corps—Appointment of Chaplain (Lt. Col.) William C. Shure as Chief, Military Personnel Division, Office Chief of Chaplains, was announced this week. He succeeds Chaplain (Col.) William J. Moran, who has been assigned to Ft. Shafter, T. H. Chaplain (Maj.) Joseph S. Chmielewski has assumed duties with the Military Personnel Division, Office Chief of Chaplains.

Korean Volunteers in U. S. Units—In a move unprecedented in the history of the United States Armed Forces, Korean volunteers in large numbers are being integrated into the ranks of U. S. divisions at the fighting fronts. Thus, an experiment started late in August by units of the U. S. 1st Cavalry Division has received official sanction by General MacArthur's headquarters. Recruited from the civilian population of the Republic of Korea, the volunteers will be paid and administered by their own government.

After a period of training in American arms and equipment the new volunteers are going into the line as an integral part of our tactical forces—that is, to fight shoulder-to-shoulder with American troops. Up to now they are being employed in infantry companies where their knowledge of guerrilla warfare, the terrain and the language makes them valuable additions to our front-line units.

Garbed in U. S. uniforms with distinctive Korean insignia, the volunteers are provided U. S. rations, and special service items, the same as U. S. troops, including American movies.

General Is "Admiral"—Lt. Gen. William H. H. Morris, jr., Commander in Chief, Caribbean, Quarry Heights, Canal Zone, today enjoys the distinction of being an Admiral in the Navy of the State of Texas.

This honor comes as a result of a friendship he has built up with the Men of Texas. The association began when he was an instructor at the First Officers' Training Camp in 1917 at Leon Springs, Tex. Remembering his good will and sincerity, the Men of Texas invited General Morris to attend the 34th Roll Call of the Texas First Campers. Unable to attend the convention personally to receive this honor, General Morris nonetheless was honored in absentia with an Honorary Admiralship in the Texas Navy.

Engraved on the scroll, signed by Texas Governor Allan Shivers, is a capsuled history of the Texas Navy. In the days when Sam Houston headed the Republic, four gallant little ships, the "Liberty," the "Brutus," the "Invincible," and the "Independence," comprised the "fleet." This force shortened the Texas War of Independence by holding the New Orleans supply lines open, compelling the Mexican forces to travel a long, overland route, exposing them to hostile Indians. The small Navy captured several prizes during the war and so persistent was the Navy's harassment of the enemy, that, after the Mexican defeat at San Jacinto, their retreat had to be made on half rations.

Texas won her freedom and proclaimed her independence on 2 March, 1836. As for the gallant little four ships of the Navy, the "Liberty" was sold to satisfy repair bills, the "Independence" was later captured in a battle with two Mexican gunboats and the "Brutus" and "Invincible" were pounded to pieces by waves after having grounded on sandbars in the Gulf.

Combat Infantry Badge—Each rifleman who fights in Korea will earn a combat infantry badge but few will have them pinned on during combat as did members of one unit of the 25th Infantry Division. So proud of his men that he couldn't wait until they came off the line, Lt. Col. Richard W. Keyes went up to their positions and pinned on the badges. The men stood proudly next to their foxholes as the Colonel, their battalion commander, pinned the badges to their jackets. Then they went back to the business of fighting the Reds.

Promote Army Lts.

tion to major and names of women officers in various rank selected for higher temporary grades.

According to the basic Army regulation governing temporary promotions, a selection board must consider Regular and Reserve officers in ratio to the total number of each group on active duty in a particular rank.

It is significant to note that the number of Regular and Reserve officers actually selected for promotion on the Army Promotion List closely approximate the relative number in each on active duty, as of the latest "unclassified" statistics made available this week.

Army officials said that at that time, there were a total of 20,355 first lieutenants, of whom 17,348 were Reserves and 3,007, Regulars. It is not believed that the ratio has changed materially subsequent to the compilation of these figures.

With the ratio of Regulars approximately 3 to 17, the actual Army Promotion List selections were 372 Regulars and 1,719 non-Regulars.

The junior Regular first lieutenant selected for temporary promotion to captain, Army officials reported, was Michael J. Burke, whose promotion list number is 14828. He holds date of permanent rank as a first lieutenant from 30 April 1948. His basic date of appointment is given in the official 1950 Army Register as 30 April 1945.

The cutoff date for Reservists was date of rank as of 28 February 1945.

Among the chaplains, the junior first lieutenant selected was Harold B. Lawson. The cutoff date for Reservists was 31 Aug. 1947.

The junior Regular first lieutenant of the Judge Advocate General's Corps selected for promotion was No. 284 on the JAGC promotion list, Houston C. Reynolds, who holds permanent date of rank as a first lieutenant from 10 June 1948. The zone of consideration for Reservists extended to 31 July 1947.

There were no Regular Medical Service Corps lieutenants selected, and the Reserve zone of consideration went to 30 Aug. 1945.

Dependent Allowances

The Department of Defense on 25 Sept. issued an official statement explaining how payments under the Dependents Assistance Act of 1950 will be made. The following is the complete text of the Department's announcement:

Plans for carrying out provisions of the Dependents Assistance Act of 1950, which provides allowances for quarters for enlisted personnel of all grades with dependents, were announced today by the Department of Defense.

The Act became effective last 1 August. Allowances to which Army and Air Force personnel are entitled for the months of August and September will be paid directly to enlisted personnel with their regular pay for September. Allowances due for the month of October will likewise be given to personnel with their October pay. Cash payments to Navy and Marine Corps personnel will also have been completed by the end of October.

During September and October it will be the responsibility of the enlisted person himself to furnish funds for the support of his dependents. Those dependents who do not receive funds for their support during this period should communicate directly with the enlisted person upon whom they are dependent.

Beginning with allowances due for the month of November, checks for the full amounts—allotments from the servicemen, plus allowances made by the services—will be mailed directly to the dependents.

Dependents of Army and Air Force personnel who do not receive checks for the month of November by 15 December should communicate directly with the Class Q Allotment Division, Army Finance Center, St. Louis 20, Missouri. Full information should be given as to the name of the member in the service, his service number and last known address. Dependents should also include their own full name, address and relationship.

Dependents of Navy personnel who do not receive checks for the month of November by mid-December should write to the Allotment Division, Field Branch, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Cleveland 14, Ohio. Marine Corps dependents should direct their letters to the Marine Corps Allotment Officer, Headquarters, U. S. Marine Corps, Washington 25, D. C.

Retired Army Generals

Retired general officers of the Army in the metropolitan area of Washington have been invited by Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., and General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, to attend an orientation conference at the Pentagon on 5 Oct.

General Collins said that the officers have been asked to this session in order that they may be brought up-to-date on the current state of training and readiness of the Army and to give them an opportunity to discuss with the Secretary and the Chief of Staff matters of mutual interest.

A similar conference was held last January.

Army Grid Team

The U. S. Military Academy football team opens its 1950 season today, 30 Sept., against Colgate at Michie Stadium, West Point.

In 1949, the Army team did not lose a game.

The game today marks the first meeting between Army and Colgate since 1943 when the Cadets recorded a decisive 42 to 0 victory. Colgate, however, won the two previous games scoring a 13 to 0 win in 1915 and repeating by a score of 14 to 7 in 1936. The series stands at 8 wins for Army, 2 for Colgate with two ties.

2d Inf. Division

Lt. Col. Ralph L. Foster, formerly on the staff of the Senior Army Instructor, ORC, New Mexico Military District, has joined the Second Infantry Division in Korea. He has been assigned to the division General Staff.

Col. Guy S. Meloy, jr., has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in combat.

The citation said that Colonel Meloy, then commanding the 19th Infantry Regiment, personally led a counterattack with two lightly armored vehicles through heavy machine gun and sniper fire after learning that a large enemy force had penetrated the unit's position and was menacing the 1st battalion command post.

He personally took charge of a machine gun position to aid the counter-attack and continued to lead and inspire his men until loss of blood from a wound forced his evacuation. His fearless and aggressive leadership, the citation said, so inspired the officers and men of his unit that the enemy attacking force was eliminated.

Legislative Review

The second session of the 81st Congress gave much competition to the first in the matter of enacting legislation involving the Armed Forces.

The first session which began in January 1949 was marked by putting into law, bills that provided for unification of the military departments; a radar system; guided missiles development; housing; experimental submarines; the revised pay schedules; wind-tunnel facilities and an Air Engineering Development Center.

Major legislation placed on the statute books during the second session has included the following: a code of military justice applicable to all in the Department of Defense; extensive construction at military and naval installations within and outside the continental United States; a revision of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, to provide for compulsory attrition of naval officers; a statutory basis, growing out of W. W. II, for the internal organization of the Army and the Department of the Army; statutory strength authorizations for the Army and Air Force.

Additional major enactments increased dependents' allowances; suspended for four years the restriction on the authorized strength of the components of the Armed Forces; authorized the construction or conversion of modern naval vessels; and provided income tax exemption benefits for personnel in combat.

Among the bills to be considered when Congress returns in November, or during the first session of the 82d Congress will doubtless be those providing for Universal Military Training; establishing an Air Force Academy; survivors benefits; increasing the number of Air Force Generals above the grade of major general; and a measure calling for a review of records of naval officers who failed of advancement during World War II. This last bill (S. 780) was passed by the Senate and is on the Calendar of the House.

Information from the Senate Committee on Armed Services indicates that until Congress reconvenes on 27 November the Professional Staff of the Committee, and "task forces" of the preparedness subcommittee, will engage in varied investigative missions to lay a foundation for full committee action and for possible legislation to be submitted before the close of the 81st Congress or at the opening of the 82d Congress.

Hearings on Universal Military Training are scheduled to be begun by the Senate Committee about the middle of November, looking toward the possible introduction of necessary legislation on the subject early in January. Witnesses are to come from Government Departments and Agencies other than the Department of Defense, the plan being to try to learn the probable impact of UMT training on the national economy.

It is known that inspection and investigation of Alaskan activities called for and provided for by legislation are already under way.

$100 Pay Ruling

Maj. Gen. E. M. Foster, Army Chief of Finance, this week informed Army Finance Officers by message WCL 44732 of the content of Public Law 779 dated 9 Sept., extending the payment of $100 per month additional pay to physicians and dentists of the reserve components upon being called or ordered to active duty with or without their consent.

Previously, reserve personnel were required to volunteer for active duty to be entitled to the additional pay.

Personnel on duty prior to 9 Sept. 1950 are entitled to the additional pay from that date. Reserve officers serving on active duty as interns will not be paid the additional pay. AR 35-1120 is being amended to incorporate the provisions of the new law, the Army said.

Aircraft Rocket Contract

A $35,000,000 contract for the construction of additional facilities at the Naval Ordnance Depot, Shumaker, Ark., has been awarded by the Navy to the four combined contracting firms which handled the original construction project at Shumaker during World War II.

The new facilities will add production lines for the assembly and loading of aircraft rockets to meet the needs of the Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps. Work under the new contract will be started immediately, and is expected to be completed in 12 months.

The combined contracting firms are Winston Brothers Company, Minneapolis; C. F. Haglin & Sons, Inc., Minneapolis; Missouri Valley Constructors, Leavenworth, Kans.; and Sollitt Construction Company, Inc., South Bend, Ind.

Production lines which had been partially constructed when work on the Shumaker depot was stopped after V-J Day will be completed under the contract, which also covers completion of production buildings, personnel structures, utilities, railroads, additional magazines, and grading and drainage.

Rear Adm. J. F. Jelley, Chief of the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks, said the contracting combination was asked to continue the job because of their excellent record on the original project, their familiarity with the site, and their ability to move rapidly on an urgent construction project.

As a result of the Korean conflict, the requirements for aircraft rockets have been greatly expanded. To meet the needs for aircraft rockets, which have proved effective in combat, additional production lines for the assembly and loading of rockets are to be established at Shumaker. About $35,000,000 worth of construction remains to be done to complete this portion of the original $135,000,000 installation.

RCA Mobile Radio to Korea

A complete mobile station for handling various types of radio communications has been assembled and dispatched to the Korean fighting front, according to an announcement made by Maj. Gen. Harry C. Ingles, USA-Ret., President of RCA Communications, Inc.

Operation of this RCA station in Korea will relieve Army facilities of much of their burden of important press, government, and personal messages that they must currently handle, and will make it possible for men in front-line forces to communicate with their families by direct radiotelegraph service, Mr. Ingles said. The RCA unit, assembled at the request of U. S. Armed Services, includes facilities for radiotelephone, radiophoto and voice program service, as well as regular telegraph service.

The mobile unit has been housed in Army-type trucks and trailers that can be quickly moved to meet Army requirements. Sixteen radio operators and technicians will provide continuous, 24 hour service for handling radio communications direct with San Francisco, and, via

More Controls Seen

Further controls over business were forecast this week by Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer. However, the Secretary felt that oppressive restrictions on buying by the ultimate consumer were unnecessary.

Mr. Sawyer said there should be no reason why American industry could not produce all military equipment needed to meet defense requirements, and at the same time provide the civilian population with sufficient products to maintain "the highest living standard in the world."

The Secretary said he believed the output of steel would be sufficient for military and civilian needs, making it unnecessary at present for the Government to build additional steel plants. He added:

"We will, perhaps, have so-called limitation orders by which we will forbid the manufacture of certain articles which are consuming materials needed in connection with military operations."

"There will probably be so-called priority orders or ratings under which a manufacturer is required to fill the orders of the military before he fills anything else."

Mr. Sawyer said that if businessmen held on to or built up inventories in excess of requirements, and in disregard of the order of the National Production Authority limiting inventories, "we will requisition what they have, or we will requisition the excess, without any hesitancy whatever."

this route, to other countries.

Henry A. Mortara, of the RCA San Francisco office, will direct the group in Korea. Mr. Mortara gained valuable experience in this type of operation during World War II when he managed RCA mobile radio stations which accompanied the Allied Armies in Europe. He will proceed in advance of the staff and equipment to establish headquarters and co-operate with the Military Authorities in setting up RCA facilities.

During World War II, RCA Communications operated three radio-telegraph circuits for troops in the European Theater.

GMC Official Honored

Sherred E. Skinner of Lansing, Mich., received the Exceptional Civilian Service award from Under Secretary of the Army Archibald S. Alexander in a ceremony at the Pentagon on 22 Sept.

Mr. Skinner, Vice President of General Motors and General Manager of the Oldsmobile Division was given the Army's highest civilian award for "exceptional service to the Army, as Director of the Production Division of Army Service Forces in Washington from 1 Sept., 1942 to 1 March, 1943."

Guests present at the ceremony included Maj. Gen. John K. Christmas, Chief, Procurement Division, G-4, U. S. Army; Mr. Lester F. Carlson, Assistant to Mr. Skinner; Lt. Col. F. Clay Bridgewater, Office of the Under Secretary of the Army, and Mr. John Danton of the Army Civilian Awards Board.

New Defense Vessels

Plans are being drafted for early construction of a vast new national defense fleet of upwards of 50 merchant ships to meet the nation's needs in any eventuality, according to Vice Adm. Edward L. Cochrane, Federal Maritime Board Chairman. Since the Administration feels that the Liberties which formed the backbone of the American Merchant Marine during World War II are inadequate for use in a future war, it has drafted plans for a fast new type cargo ship described as being faster than any vessel afloat, and differing from the "prototype" ship.

Although details on the new-type ship were not revealed, it is understood designs will enable the ship to be turned out in mass production during an emergency. The vessel will also be able to run "independently" of a wartime convoy, thus making the vessel, its cargo and crew much safer than the slower Liberty type used in World War II. In addition to the proposed ship's safety features, its high speed will mean that a smaller number of vessels will be at sea at any one time during a war, Admiral Cochrane declared, adding that it is clearly in the commercial trend to transport goods faster and more safely. About 300 Victories remained in the reserve fleet on 30 June, of which 240 were cargo vessels, according to Admiral Cochrane who declared that "we are looking now at the last 100 Victories left in the reserve as a result of the drain on the fleet by the military needs in Korea." * * *

Gen. Somervell Hits "Inaction"

General Brehon Somervell, USA-Ret., war-time chief of the Army Service Forces, addressed the National Industrial Conference Board in New York 20 Sept., presenting what he termed a "rather bleak picture of government inaction during the past three years."

He did this, he said, "entirely with the idea of emphasizing the great need for all of us to recognize our plight and give it our utmost in this time of urgent need."

General Somervell, who since his retirement has been Chairman and President of Koppers Company, Inc., of Pittsburgh, contended that we "still have no foreign policy we can all understand." He also declared that we are still far from united and still far from industrial peace.

Army and Navy unification, he said, has "presented a sorry spectacle in which energies were wasted which would well have been devoted to constructive action. The National Security Resources Board, key agency of nationwide mobilization for security, was allowed to languish and was without a chairman for a year so politics could proceed as usual."

As to industrial preparedness, General Somervell said:

"We have the industrial capacity to produce the goods of war, but the plans for turning this capacity to war production when needed have been slow in formulation. In such plans, industry must have government guidance to know what is wanted, to know where supplies of critical materials will come from. Actually, many industries drew up their industrial mobilization plans as far as they could and now are still waiting for further direction from government. What these industries have done is all to the good, but how much better their plans could be now if federal moves toward mobilization stockpiling, etc., had moved with more direction, with more aggressiveness."

"And another thing. The very industries which we must now look to for essential military production have been harried and harassed by government on this and that political pretext when they might have been harnessing their energies for the present and future struggles."

"What has been accomplished in these last three years does not present a record of which this nation can be proud. Viewed in retrospect, it is indeed disheartening."

"The record on leadership during these years speaks for itself. If we are no more successful in marshaling the forces of freedom than we were in mobilizing for world leadership, we shall be a sorry sight indeed."

"Now let's see what industry is doing despite our uncertain leadership."

"Though progress during the last three years has been lamentably lacking, the stark necessities of the Korean conflict must vitalize those forces which are essential if we are to meet our responsibilities. In contrast to government, the Conference Board has done what it could in keeping these matters before its members and the public. The Management and Staff should be complimented highly for the preparation of several studies on Industrial Mobilization. These studies do not give all the answers, as it is impossible for anyone to have all the answers to this problem, but they perform in an outstanding way a most valuable service, that of stimulating our thinking in fields where our plans and decisions may make the difference between survival and disaster. If you have not already given these papers a thorough study, and if you have not required the key men in your organization to read them, I recommend that you do so without delay."

"Considerable progress has been made in planning for production. The mobilization plan of our own company is described in some detail in the Conference Board publications. It does not seem necessary to go into it tonight."

"Similarly a host of companies have done their production planning for mobilization and executed accepted schedules of production with the Armed Forces for many items required for our common defense."

"The various Commodity Committees of the American Ordnance Association and the National Security Industrial Association are reported to have made an outstanding contribution to our national preparedness and security in their work with the Armed Forces. Their work in reviewing and evaluating proposed designs for military and naval items, and their step-by-step study of the production problems of many critical parts have brought forth suggested changes and accumulated valuable "know-how" which should save thousands upon thousands of man-hours when production in quantity is required."

QMC Officials Confer

Top ranking Quartermaster supply officers from all continental U. S. QM supply installations, as well as Quartermasters of the six army headquarters in the country will meet at the Office of The Quartermaster in Washington 2-5 Oct. for a conference with Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, The Quartermaster General, and members of his staff.

The four-day conference was initiated by General Feldman for the purpose of indoctrinating the officers responsible for the supply of QM items in the tremendous task faced by the entire Corps in outfitting the expanding Army called for by the President. Heads of divisions of the OQMG and other members of the staff will discuss various facets of the supply program, and ample time will be afforded for full and complete discussion after each presentation.

Conferences such as this can be "among the most important phases" of supply planning, General Feldman said, in announcing the meeting. "We hope to provide for the Depot Commanders and QM Supply Officers the kind of information they require to perform the job they have before them."
